STILLWATER.

A Visit to that Thriving City—The History of a Great Manufacturing Company—A Word About the Younger Brothers.

STILLWATER, Minn., March 22, 1882. Stillwater is a city of 12,000 inhabitants, on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railway—twenty-five miles from St. Paul—and is noted as a great lumbering center and an especially thrifty city. Aside from having many fine buildings, it has one of the finest opera houses in the West, built on the same plan as the Taber Opera house at Denver, Colorado. The State prison is located at this place, and contains 235 convicts, and of that number, three are the noted Younger Brothers, who are the lions of the prison. Hardly any one visits Stillwater without making a request to see these notorious robbers and murderers. Through the kindness of Mr. Abe Hall, assistant warden of the prison, we had the pleasure of seeing them. They are splendid looking men, and by proper conduct could have made men who would have been an honor to any community. They are kept in the 7th story of the building, and are seldom seen by visitors. By the way, Abe Hall, the efficient assistant warden, is a Wisconsin man, and previous to 1861, was connected with the State prison at Waupun for five years. He is a noted detective and keeps well informed on many of the "crooks" in all parts of the country. He is a pleasant gentleman, and has a keen eye on all matters connected with the convicts and the management of the prison.

The prison labor is employed by the well known firm, Seymour, Sabin & Co., one of the most extensive manufacturing companies in the west, who employ 200 convicts. The ground work of this company was started in 1861, and then made barrels only, employing about 30 convicts. This branch is still kept up, and now manufactures 180,000 barrels a year. From the small beginning of 1861, has grown the mammoth concern of Seymour, Sabin & Co., which now employs 1,100 operatives, making last year 1,500 thrushes called the Minnesota Chief, which commands ready sale in all parts of the country and has no superior; and also made 300 engines which are used for threshing purposes. They make office and bank furniture of the latest and best styles, and sell in large quantities.

Another branch of manufactures, by this great company, is railway rolling stock. They have the capacity of turning out 12 freight cars a day, and they are eagerly taken by the large railway companies which center at St. Paul and Minneapolis. During the past year the company has enlarged its shops by the addition of a building in which to put up and finish cars, which is 316x80 feet, 4 stories high, and cost $50,000; one wood building 300x64, costing $70,000; foundry building, $26,000; residence for employees, $20,000; and an enlargement of offices $2,600, making the total cost of improvements, $168,600.

In addition to these buildings, the company is reducing a large bank preparatory to erecting other works, and the clay taken from this bank is being made into brick of a very superior quality. The machinery placed in the works recently, cost $50,000, and is of the very best the country can afford or money buy. The pay roll for the month of February was $30,000, which does not include salaries of men of whom there are a great many. An immense blast furnace has just been completed with a capacity of 800 tons per day. The company has purchased from the Doty works in Janesville, one of the largest punches ever made by the Doty works. One of the company told us that after looking the country over they decided that the Doty punch was superior to all others, which is a flattering compliment to the Doty works.

The Minnesota Chief thrasher was placed on the market only six years ago, and has attained its high position by being a very superior machine. We were pleased to meet our old friend, T. H. Goodhue, who represented this company for the past four years as its general agent, but now is returned to the company's office, and has moved his family to Stillwater, and is now a permanent resident of this city. The company has shown its sagacity and business tact in securing as successor to Mr. Goodhue, as their general agent, a citizen of Janesville, Mr. P. G. Strickler, a gentleman well qualified for the position in every respect. Mr. Strickler has been general agent for the Birdsell manufacturing company of South Bend, Indiana, for five years past, and therefore is well known to the trade of the Great West.

The company is composed of D. N. Sabin, president, W. S. Goodhue, secretary, and G. M. Seymour, treasurer; but next Tuesday a new company will be formed, and known as the Northwestern Car manufacturing company, with a capital stock paid up of three million dollars. This new company is virtually the same as the old one, and will be under the same management as the old one, which is a guarantee that the new company will win success.

These immense shops are illuminated by the celebrated Edison electric light. The burners are of the horseshoe shape, and are in glass globes, and make a brilliant light. It is the most successful and satisfactory light the company can use.

GOLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF AND TONIC INVIGORATOR will cure indigestion, and perpetuate bodily vigor. Take no other. Of druggists.

Both houses took a recess till 4 o'clock p. m.

A GRAND OVATION.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The reception at the White House this evening was a perfect ovation. Fully 3,000 persons passed into the mansion and were presented to the President between the hours of 8 and 10 o'clock. The doors were opened at 8 o'clock, and from that time until 11 the east room, red, blue and green parlors were crowded, and the line extended across the corridors and vestibule unbroken to the entrance. Outside at 10 o'clock two broad lines extended on either side of the portico half way down the walk to the gates. Double lines of carriages extended from the eastern gate to the portico. The most perfect order prevailed outside, the crowd being almost silent while waiting, and moving slowly, step by step, toward the door. The arrangements in the cloak rooms were admirable, the state dining room being used for the ladies' wraps, and the private dining room for the gentlemen's cloak room.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Secretary Kirkwood, when asked, to-day, if it was not true that he had sent his family to Iowa and removed his furniture, exclaimed the first but urged the impossibility of the last, massing as he did not own as much as a chair to sit upon. His preparations for departure are completed, but he is in ignorance of the President's intention as to the time of his relief. Teller has forwarded his resignation by mail, and his appointment to the Interior Department awaits an answer. The uncertainty and suspension resulting from the President's very deliberate moves are a little confusing. It is reported that they are, in fact, attributed to a powerful resistance to Teller's appointment.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

MADISON, March 28.—Articles of the Long Lake and Branch Improvement company were filed to-day in the office of the Secretary of State. The incorporators are W. A. Rust, J. S. Owen, and Ralph E. Rust, whose object is to improve the Long Lake branch of White river and Long Lake upon a capital of $5,000.

Resolutions were filed increasing the capital stock of Knapp, Stout & Co., to $400,000.

Articles of consolidation of Knapp, Stout & Co. with the Red Cedar River Improvement and Log-driving company, the capital of which is to be $2,050,000 were also filed, as well as articles consolidating Knapp, Stout & Co. with the Red Cedar Improvement Company. The capital of the last organization is to be $2,050,000.

STAR ROUTE INDICTMENT.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The government attorneys are confident that the attempt to quash the star route indictments will fail. One of the leading counsel for the government says: "There is nothing whatever in the old colonial Maryland statute of 1722, upon which the defense are attempting to rely. The star route people might as well maintain that an indictment cannot be found now without the approval of the governor and council of the old colony of Maryland, for that provision is also in this ancient statute. But, as a matter of fact, this very statute has been passed upon, and the present criminal court seventy years ago, decided that it had no force in this district, and that the judicial system of which it was a part had become obsolete and was supplanted by the modern system. The statute of 1722 is no more in force as to the star route indictments than are the old statutes as to blasphemy in the district which never have technically been repealed, and which require that a blasphemer shall have his tongue bored through." The court will decide the question next week.

"Made New Again."

Mrs. Wm. D. Ryckman, St. Catharines, Ont., says: "R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. I have used your 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets,' for the last three months and find myself—what shall I say?—made new again. The only words that express it. I was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk across the floor without fainting, could keep nothing in the shape of food on my stomach. Myself and friends had given up all hope, my immediate death seemed certain. I now live to the surprise of everybody and am able to do my own work."

A ROBBER HUNT.

LITTLE ROCK, March 28.—A Dallas special to the Gazette says: "Detective Jack Duncan left to-day for Arizona to secure Frank Jackson, the most desperate member of Sam Bass' gang of train robbers. Jackson has been at large since the famous fight at Round Rock, in 1878, in which Sam Bass, Sebe Barnes, and others were killed. Positive information has been received that Jackson has been lurking between Las Vegas, Tucson, Tombstone, and Prescott since last November, at the head of a gang of desperadoes. There is a standing reward of $2,500 for Jackson, which was offered four years ago by the state, the railway companies and express companies who were robbed by the Bass gang. The detective also took papers with him to bring back, Trackle, a Navarro county murderer."

Profit $1,200.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it, for their benefit."

WISCONSIN MILITIA.

RACINE, March 28.—The Janesville Guards, the Bower City Rifles, of Janesville, the Custer Rifles, of Whitewater, the Beloit City Guards, the Delavan Guards, the Racine Light Guard, the Racine Garfield Guards, and the Monroe and Kenosha companies, have sent an application to Governor Rusk to form the First Regiment Wisconsin National Guard.

OBITUARY.

PORTAGE, March 28.—Rev. Father J. M. Brady, priest of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, in this city, died to-day of pneumonia, after an illness of four days.

SUIT AGAINST A SHERIFF.

OSHKOSH, March 28.—A suit was begun to-day in the Circuit Court by Andrew Haben, assignee of the estate of Jane E. Bigger, against W. D. Harshaw, sheriff, to recover the value of goods seized and sold out by New York creditors. The sum involved is $1,000. The creditors under whose authority the goods were attached became the actual defendants upon bonds of indemnity to the sheriff.

Voice of the People.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.: "I had a serious disease of the lungs, and was for a time confined to my bed and under the care of a physician. His prescription did not help me. I grew worse, coughing very severely. I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and it cured me."

Yours respectfully,
JUDITH BURNETT, Hillsdale, Mich.

A BIG SUIT.

RACINE, Wis., March 28.—The great suit of J. I. Case against Fish Bros., to recover about $175,000 came up for argument before Referee J. B. Winslow to-day. Case sues to recover money advanced to Fish Bros., for principle and interest. Mr. Jenkins opened the argument for the plaintiff. He began by stating the issues between the parties. The theory of the plaintiff, as he stated it, is that he (the plaintiff) was, by the agreement of the parties, to be the principal in the business, and they were to act as his agents. For their compensation they were to have a fixed percentage of $100 per month, and, after the plaintiff received back from the business the amount of his investment in it, with interest and payment for his time of services, and the use of his credit, the defendants were to have what should be made above it. The defendants' theory is that Mr. Case merely loaned them money to carry on their business at 10 per cent interest, and after it had been conducted for a year, claimed to be paid at 12 1/2 per cent interest by what they alleged was an usurious agreement made in 1859. They also claimed that a similar usurious agreement was again made in 1873. Arguments will occupy nearly a week.

On the Egean Sea.

At last at two in the afternoon, Chios, the ill-starred, is in sight. As if she had glory enough in giving birth to "the blind old man of Scio's rocky isle," she must add to the great epic a fiery ordeal and tragedy. The isle is only about the size of Orange County, New York, thirty-two by eighteen miles, but it is big with renown! Cut off by a narrow strait from Asia, it looms upon the vision in three-fold mountainous magnificence. As we near it a breeze blows down the strait from the northwest. How do I ascertain this point of the compass? Not alone by the red, blue, and white Russian ensign, whose double eagle dangles wind and seizes the sun; not from the white plumes which shine upon the cloven helmet of the wave, but from the dozen Moslems on the deck, who, with unfailing piety, turn, by starlight or sunlight, toward Mecca, and "compass" our thought. One of these Moslems is a soldier, three are Canaanites, one an Imam, or priest, and all are pilgrims bound to Mecca. As Chios is more clearly sighted, one of this number calls to prayers! It is the Muezzin. How strange and audacious his call, on this steamer of civilization! Soon the carpets are upon the deck, and the genuflections and monotonous of the pilgrims begin. Then, putting upon their prayer-slippers, they, too, take a curious look at the celebrated and ill-fated island. This isle is known to the Mohammedans, not for its wine, for they are abstinent; not for its figs, for other places are more prolific; not for its silk, for silken Broussa outdoes all these; but for its medjeh, the product of the lentisk tree, which when incised drops its gum about the middle of August. When refined it is used by the Levantine females, who are not too laud to knit like Penelope, and not too lazy to chew. It is to the female what tobacco is to our sex. It also makes liquor. This gum was the chief source of revenue to the mother of the Sultan, and the isle is said to have had some political and other advantages by reason of this peculiar product.

As we draw nearer to this isle of Chios I look about to see the terrible work of the earthquake. What a catastrophe, for ever so little a tremble! Looking away to the east for a moment the mainland appears a rocky reach of high, clear-lined mountains. They are streaked with dark lines and vales. Beyond and above Scio the shade and sunlight alternate, and at their base there are flat green spots, deltas of mountain streams. A few villages are scattered along. The city of Castro itself, which once contained 30,000 people, was the capital of the island when it had 110,000. This was before the Greek revolution of 1822. It now looks like a shivered, twisted skeleton. Its very sea-walls give token of its shattered condition. As we approach still nearer we perceive a hundred vessels in the harbor, if it may be called one, by courtesy. The mountains above now seem topped by palisades, and still above them and remote are other dreamy Grecian mountains, full of myths and with little specks of green, where dryads, and olives, and Pan, and Nature once lurked. The sea never looked so blue in its bonnets of white. The ragged sea-walls give a still more desolate look to the harbor, to which the demolished castle adds its sad aspect. The city looks like a disordered body holding a crazy mind. There are trees amid the ruins. They give even to the desolation a sort of sylvan Grecian beauty, for trees are now rare on these denuded Grecian isles. Now, as we come still nearer, the waves are seen to make cascades over and channels through the broken mole. Some windmills fly their sails on the lowest lands. A few other sails on the steeper element—the sea—ply their work in front of the harbor.—Congressman Cox in New York Express.

Black Birch for Furniture.

Black birch is rapidly coming into favor. Black birch is a close-grained, handsome wood, and can be easily stained to resemble walnut exactly. It is just as easy to work, and is suitable for nearly, if not all, the purposes to which walnut is at present applied. Birch is much the same color as cherry, but the latter wood is now scarce, and consequently dear. It is with difficulty that cherry wood can be obtained at $50 a thousand feet, while birch wood can be purchased at any saw-mill for $1 per thousand feet. When properly stained it is almost impossible to distinguish the difference between it and walnut, as it is susceptible of a beautiful polish, equal to any wood now used in the manufacture of furniture.

Don't think you can with impunity adopt the follies of other folks; your constitution may not be equally well able to bear abuse.

A Painter's Epitaph.

The following is a translation of the quaint epitaph of Hubrecht van Eyck: "Take warning from me, ye who walk over me. I was as you are, but an buried dead beneath you. Thus it appears, that neither art nor medicine availed me. Art, honor, wisdom, riches, are not spared when death comes. Hubrecht van Eyck I was once named, now I am food for worms. Formerly highly honored in painting, this was all shortly afterwards turned to naught."

"It was in the year of the Lord one thousand four hundred and twenty-six, on the eighteenth day of September, that I rendered up my soul to God, in suffering. Pica sin, turn to the best, for you must follow me at last."

A Deserted City.

Situated on a beautiful bay which sets in from the Gulf of Mexico, and in the western coast of Florida writes a Florida correspondent, there flourished about 1817 the prosperous city of St. Joseph. It had many attractions. The location was charming and the climate delightful. At that time it was fast becoming a business centre. The first railroad in the State was built from St. Joseph to a point on the Chatahochee river, the fine harbor for shipping being the inducement, and large quantities of cotton were sent from northern Florida and Alabama to be shipped to northern and European ports. Receiving and transferring these large amounts of cotton was the chief industry of the place, and made business very active during the winter months. Capital was invested in warehouses, stores, docks, etc. Just as prosperity and happiness seemed assured, the yellow fever made its appearance, sweeping the place like a scourge. This was the summer of 1841. Whole families died in the midst of their lonely surroundings. Many fled terrified and never returned, seeking their fortunes anew elsewhere. Business firms and families were broken up or wholly destroyed and the city was left a scene of wreck and ruin. Five years later it presented a melancholy spectacle and strikingly picturesque. The skeleton warehouses, costly and capacious houses, now doorless and windowless, rose like spectres on every side, many of the houses being almost buried in a tangled mass of vines, flowers and shrubs, cultivated and wild. Now and then parties of hunters from a distance would take possession of some one of these ruins as headquarters, while seeking deer and other game with which the woods not far off abounded. But after a while even these occasional visitors ceased, as the place became more and more isolated. "The last residents were an old man and his daughter, who lived entirely alone, subsisting on the resources of their garden, the fish of the lake and the game of the woods, and depending for other necessities on the sale of shell-work, made from the exquisitely fine shells found in abundance along the lovely beach to which they made occasional trips to a point twenty-five miles distant. At last the old man and his daughter left, and none now remain to tell the story of a once bright and promising city."

How to Write.

The noted novelist, Miss Mulock, has a few pleasant words to say concerning her method of novel-writing which may be useful to young writers: All stories that are meant to live must contain the germ of life, the egg, the vital principle. Therefore, the first thing is to fix on a central idea, like the spine of a human being, or the trunk of a tree. From it, this one principal idea, proceed, and afterwards, the kind of plot which will best develop it, the characters which must act it out, the incidents that will express these characters, even to the conversations which evolve and describe these incidents—all are sequences following one another in natural order. Every part should be made subservient to the whole. You must have a foreground and a background and a middle distance. If you persist in working up one character, or finishing minutely one incident or series of incidents, your perspective will be destroyed, and your novel become a mere collection of fragments, not work of art at all. The true artist will be ready to sacrifice any part detail to the perfection of the whole. A novel does not grow naturally, but represents a great deal of hard work. When I was young, an older and more experienced writer once said to me: "Never use two adjectives where one will do; never use an adjective at all where a noun will do. Avoid italics, notes of exclamation, foreign words and quotations. Put full stops instead of colons; make your sentences as short and clear as you possibly can, and whenever you think you have written a particularly fine sentence, cut it out." We novelists cannot help but smile when asked if such and such a character is "taken from life," and especially when ingenious critics persist in identifying—usually falsely—certain persons, places or incidents. For me, I have only to say that during all the years I have studied humanity I never met one human being who could have been "put into a book," as a whole, without injuring it. The only safe field for a writer is fiction.

Determined Success.

The writer that talks of the great things that may be achieved by a determined will—by an intense, continuous act of volition to do and be such and such a thing—forgets that this power of willing strongly is, to a large extent, a gift of nature, and as rare as any other good thing in the world. As a sensible writer says: "A man starts on his career with a tacit understanding with himself, that he is to succeed. If it is step-by-step progress. He probably has no distinct aim. It is only in books that he resolves from the first dawning of ambition to become owner of such an estate, or bishop of such a see. But he means to get on, and labors to that end. He fixes his thought beyond immediate self-indulgence, chooses his friends as they will help the main design, falls in love on the same principle, and habitually deferring to a vague but glowing future, learns to work toward it, and for its sake to be self-denying and long forth. His success, quick; he never pleases from hand to mouth, have no use for; he lives in habitual caution, with an eye always to the main chance. Thus, he refines and enhances the natural discretion which doubles the weight and value of every other gift, and yet keeps them on an unobtrusive level, leaving itself the most notable quality, till he is universally pronounced the man made to go on by people who do not know that it is a steady will that has made him what he is."

Husband and Home.

(The Housekeeper.)

Happy is the wife whose husband regards his home as a place of rest. The drawback of home life, its contained possibilities of insipidity, sameness, and consequent weariness, is never present to such a man. He no more tires of his wife than of his own happier moods. He is no more bored with home than sleep. He is no more plagued with his children than with his own lighter thoughts. All the monotony and weariness of life he encounters outside. It is the pleasure-loving man, the merry companion, who requires constant excitement, that finds home life unendurable. He soon grows weary of it, and considers everything so very tame that it is impossible for him not only to be happy, but to feel that he is less unhappy there than elsewhere. We do not mean that the domestic man, in the wife's sense, will be always at home. The man always at home has not half the chance of the man whose duty is outside of the door. The point for the wife is, that he should like home when he is there; and that liking, we contend, belongs, first of all, to the active and not to the longer, or even the easy-minded man. The husband who when at home enjoys mental repose, is the best partner in life a woman can choose.

NEVER lean the back upon anything that is cold.

NEVER begin a journey until breakfast has been eaten.

KEEP the back, especially between the shoulder blades, well covered; also the chest well protected.

MILK which is slightly acid, and buttermilk, produce in some individuals a hypnotic (sleepy) effect.

A SMALL cup of warm milk containing a teaspoonful of lime-water may be given frequently in cases of "bowel complaint."

NEVER omit regular bathing; for unless the skin is in an active condition the cold will close the pores and favor congestion and other diseases.

OF ONE hundred infants suckled by their mothers eighteen died during the first year, while of the same number suckled by wet nurses, thirty died.

WHEN hoarse, speak as little as possible until it is recovered from, else the voice may be permanently lost or difficulties of the throat may be produced.

AN INDUSTRIOUS German collector of statistics has found that while the average life among the "well-to-do" is fifty years, among the poor it is only thirty-two.

MERELY warm the back by a fire, and never continue keeping the back exposed to the heat after it has become comfortably warm. To do otherwise is debilitating.

WHEN going from a warm atmosphere to a colder one, keep the mouth closed, so that the air may be warmed by its passage through the nose, ere it reaches the lungs.

NEVER stand still in cold weather, especially after taking a slight degree of exercise; and always avoid standing upon the ice or snow, or where the person is exposed to the cold wind.

DR. JOHN A. GUSCOCK successfully completed a fast a la Tanner (self-imposed) of forty-five days, losing fifty pounds in weight, thus confirming Dr. Letheby's estimate that an active man must consume about a pound and a fifth of aliment per day.

The proper ventilation of our school-houses is one of the most important questions of the day. Cold feet, hot head and hands, and consequent lassitude and headache, is the common complaint of many of the children in the crowded, ill-ventilated class-rooms.

A CHILD of Erin was ordered by his physician to put a mustard plaster on his chest. When the patient called next day, without any benefit to report, it was ascertained that he had applied the plaster to his trunk or clothes chest. Moral—Doctors should give very explicit directions.

DR. ANDREW CLARK, of London, says of alcoholic beverages that in a perfect state of health there is absolutely no benefit to be derived from their use, and that as he goes through the wards of his hospital he concludes that seven of every ten cases owe their ill-health to moderate drinking.

REV. CHAS. F. DEEMS tells of a young man who is constantly at war with his appetite for liquor, though he never permits himself to take a drop. Neither his father nor grandfather were addicted to his use, but his great grandfather was a habitual drunkard. There are the sins of the father visited upon the children unto the third generation. Dr. Deems says of this case of hereditary impulse, "I think it is extraordinary only in the perfect resistance which he has made to his strong inclination."

FOOD is an agent of tremendous power. Feed mankind with the same science that birds, kine, and horses are fed to wit, on their natural food—and then we may look for the healthy results obtained with those animals. Dairymen know how to feed for health and milk. Hostlers know how to feed their horses, and ladies their canaries. They all seek to give the natural, natural food of the animal under their care. Now if man would treat his own race as he treats his animals, we think human nervous systems would not show such signs of weakness.

Good Advice About Dress.

It is important to know what point of dress to emphasize. For instance, one may expect a large sum on a gown, and if the shoes are shabby or ill made, the gloves worn and the bonnet lacks style, the gown may be no longer new; but must now be carefully brushed and well put on, the collar and cuffs, or other neck and wrist trimmings, must be in perfect order, the boots well made and well blacked, even if not new, the gloves faultless and the bonnet neat and stylish. The effect is of a well-dressed woman; no man, and very few women, perceive that this dress is not a new one.—Mrs. T. W. Devoting in Harper's Magazine.
